USPA NEWS - The Chief Minister's tweet drew attention to the village secretariat system, a key pillar of his administration.

On the 76th death anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi, Chief Minister YS Jaganmohan Reddy paid homage to the Father of the Nation, highlighting his ideals and drawing parallels to his own governance initiatives.

Chief Minister Jagan took to twitter to express his reverence, saying, "Mahatma Gandhi fought for independence with truth and non-violence as his weapons and became the father of our nation. His dream of village swaraj (self-rule) has been realized in our government through the village secretariat system."

The Chief Minister Jagan’s tweet drew attention to the village secretariat system, a key pillar of his government’s administration. This network of village-level centers aims to empower rural communities by decentralizing governance and bringing essential services closer to citizens and especially to people in rural communities.

The tweet of CM highlights the government's initiatives and the ongoing efforts to bridge the gap between historical ideals and present-day realities in India's development journey.
