The ground search for two missing Pictou County siblings, Lilly and Jack Sullivan, is likely to end Sunday, according to Amy Hansen, one of the search managers helping oversee the ground search and rescue effort.

Six-year-old Lilly Sullivan and four-year-old Jack Sullivan went missing from their home in Lansdowne Station, N.S., on May 2. The sparsely populated area is about 140 kilometres northeast of Halifax.

Search Manager Amy Hansen said, "Saturday's search went very well. She said searchers covered 1.5-square kilometres of area they hadn't examined before, as well as higher probability areas around waterways."

Hansen went on to say, "The search would probably wrap up Sunday at 8 p.m. AT." Hansen wasn't aware of anything being found during Saturday's search effort.

As for the search resuming on Monday, May 19th,
"We're not anticipating continuing tomorrow, but that's a conversation that has to happen with the RCMP incident commander later on in the day."
