The Kruzer, the newest two-wheel electric self-balancing scooter, launched on Indiegogo.com on November 24, with a goal of raising $10,000 in 30 days. A cross between a scooter and skateboard, it is the perfect gift for the 15 to 50-year-old and especially someone who has every high tech toy and can't wait for the next one. Expertly-engineered to respond to the body's leanings, the rider just steps on, leans and goes “ forward, backward, and zooming in circles “ at up to 7 MPH.

More than just a snazzy toy, it is a useful tool for the business commuter who takes a van pool or bus and needs to travel the last mile to the office, the college student who goes from dorm to class, or the employee of a large campus who moves between buildings for meetings. The Kruzer makes all of these commutes easier and quicker and there is no bike rack or parking space required.

Seattle natives turned Lopez Island residents Brian and Karly Leyde are the founders of the Kruzer. Brian Leyde said, 'When we saw how quickly all of our friends mastered it and how much fun people were having, we knew we wanted to bring the Kruzer to market to share it with the world.'
